Educator Attacks 'Swing To Left'

Some College Professors Called 'Maladjusted'

Special to The Commercial Appeal

LELAND, Miss., Nov. 9.—Clarksdale School Supt. Gycelle Tynes Friday attacked left-wing college professors as "maladjusted" and called for orientation to assist students in challenging their "foolhardy theories."

He told the Leland Rotary Club that such professors had infiltrated Mississippi colleges.

"It is an amazing thing to me that the college profession seems to appeal to these persons who have gotten off center, are maladjusted, have chips on their shoulders and are orientated way out in left field,"

Mr. Tynes said.

"You no longer know what your children are subjected to. you entrust them to colleges not knowing what will happen. The left-wing tendency taking root, particularly in the social studies area of college, is most disturbing. This is what is swinging our notion off-center to the left."

The veteran public school educator said that leftist professors preyed especially on freshman and sophomore classes "where there is the poorest teaching in the world." He charged that their activities were undermining moorings established by family, school, and church in early formative years, and quoted another educator's opinion of today's campus as "anti-religious, anti-Christ, anti-God."

"This is happening in the colleges of America. This is happening in our own state. We must orientate our boys and girls against that (tendency) so that when the time comes, they can challenge and fight back," Mr. Tynes said.
